

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

From: Suzanne Schellenberg
Invisible Man Marketing & Promotion
PO Box 940436
Simi Valley, CA 93094
suzinsf@earthlink.net
<http://invisiblemanmarketingandpromotion.com/>

January 18th, 2005

Keeping The Invisible Man visible:

Fans celebrate the holiday season with congratulatory gifts for Vincent Ventresca and Thomas Vitale

Fans of the now-defunct Sci Fi Channel series, The Invisible Man, created and mailed Italian-themed gift baskets to congratulate the two men on recent successes in their respective fields. In the spirit of the holiday season, the silver-decorated gifts were delivered just before Christmas as tokens of support by fans who wished to show they have neither forgotten The Invisible Man, nor given up on the possibility of once more seeing it on the air somewhere on the newly expanded NBC Universal family of broadcast and cable networks, the current owner of the series. To the pleased surprise of fans, Mr. Ventresca was gracious enough to send the organizers a note of thanks and a greeting to I-Man fans everywhere.
<http://www.invisiblemanmarketingandpromotion.com/Assorted%20Pages/vincethanks.html>

Basket contents included a four-course Italian feast, featuring imported and domestic delectables from sopresseta to almonds to champagne. Personalized notes accompanied them, and additional letters of congratulations followed upon the delivery of the gifts. For more information, please visit:
<http://invisiblemanmarketingandpromotion.com/> and click on the Promotions button.

Mr. Vitale was recently made the new Vice President of Programming and Original Movies at Sci Fi Channel. Fans credit him with being an ally in their 2001-2002 quest to gain renewal for the highly-rated original series when it was summarily cancelled in the midst of negotiations for not one, but two additional seasons. It is hoped the expression of fan appreciation will remind him of his past support, and perhaps encourage him to continue it in the future.

Mr. Ventresca, former star of The Invisible Man, is currently employed on ABC network's Friday night hit, Complete Savages, cast in the role of Jimmy Savage, uncle to an unruly mob of 5 boys. With a strong showing in the coveted 18-45 year-old demographic, ABC recently announced that it has asked for an additional 6-9 episodes, rounding out a complete season for the freshman series, and ensuring Mr. Ventresca's continuing presence on the small screen, to the delight of his fans.

Indeed, the writer-producers of Complete Savages, Julie Thacker-Scully and Mike Scully, in association with Icon, Mel Gibson's prestigious production company, have raised the profile of Mr. Ventresca's character and generated considerable fan excitement by featuring him on a fictitious internet-dating site (<http://legitimatedating.com/>). Clad only in chest-high bubbles and seated in a bathtub, the toothsome actor chews the scenery for several minutes, with the footage concluding in an amusingly 'suggestive' fashion. General fan comments on the various online bulletin boards have been positive, if not downright enthusiastic, as Mr. Ventresca finally gets slightly unconventional exposure as a sex symbol.

About The Invisible Man

The Invisible Man -- one of the SciFi Channel's top 3 original series and consistently one of the top 10 genre shows in syndication -- premiered to critical acclaim in June 2000. It was abruptly cancelled after negotiations fell through for not one, but two more seasons in late September 2001.

During its run, the chemistry between the two lead actors, Vincent Ventresca and Paul Ben-Victor, garnered numerous accolades and the show drew critical acclaim, including several Saturn Award nominations for both its seasons and a best ensemble award from TV Zone magazine. Additionally, numerous episodes were included on The Futon Critic's list of the Top 50 Episodes of 2001 and 2002, and the show swept numerous categories in the fan-based voting for the 2002 Roswell Awards.

Created by talented Matt Greenberg (Reign of Fire), the show also created quite a buzz in the creative community, attracting such luminaries as: Armin Shimerman (Star Trek: Deep Space Nine, Buffy the Vampire Slayer), Craig Silverstein (creative consultant, producer, The Dead Zone), George Huang (director of Swimming with Sharks), Greg Yaitanes (director of episodes of Las Vegas, Cold Case), Justine Miceli (NYPD Blue), Joel Bissonette (Boulevard, Fight Club), David Burke (Joan of Arcadia), Michael Welch (Joan of Arcadia, Star Trek: Insurrection) and Adam Storke (Mystic Pizza, Prey).

For more information on The Invisible Man, the Virtual Season, or the campaign to renew the show, please email <http://www.invisiblemanmarketingandpromotion.com/> For in-person contacts, please call:

Suzanne Schellenberg: Virtual Season & IMMP co-founder: 415 668-7607

Kathleen Finn, Treasurer, IMMP: 805 523-7310

URLs for your reference:

Message boards:

Invisible Man Marketing & Promotion: <http://invisiblemanmarketingandpromotion.com/phpBB2/>

I-Maniacs.org: pub63.ezboard.com/bImaniacs

Perseusproject.com: www.perseusproject.com/MB/mb.html

Official SciFi board: <http://bboard.scifi.com/bboard/browse.php/1/5/1831>

Sites devoted to the show and campaigning for season three, region 1 DVDs and resyndication:

Invisible Man Marketing & Promotion: <http://www.invisiblemanmarketingandpromotion.com/>

Operation: Visible Ink: <http://visible-ink.net>

I-Maniacs Fan Club: www.Imaniacs.org

perseusproject.com: www.perseusproject.com/FAQ/Dispatch_Index/I-ManPassion/i-manpassion.html
and http://www.perseusproject.com/Standing_Ovation/standing_ovation.html